

Sight and Sound Protection as One

I've never been able to wear sound protection and safety glasses at the same time in the woodshop. The problem is, if you're wearing glasses and then add earmuffs, you get pinched at your temples from the pressure on the arm of the glasses. And, the hearing protection isn't effective because the arm of the glasses breaks the seal between the earmuffs and your ear.

FullPro Protective Gear has combined the two most critical pieces of personal protection in the shop into one product – SoundVision Eye Protection. We tested the Eye Protection Kit with Earmuffs that's complete with Peltor H9 earmuffs, two pairs of self-adhesive hook-and-loop patches and SoundVision lenses with flexible hook-and-loop straps.

I know; I hear you. "That's crazy." I thought so too, until we had them in the shop.

They couldn't be easier to use. The patches stick to the outside of the earmuffs and the hook-and-loop glasses straps hold firm to them. There are no arms to pinch or break the seal of the earmuffs around the ear and, as a result, no loss of hearing protection. They're easy to adjust and comfortable to wear.

And they work. The Peltor H9 earmuffs (different rated earmuffs are available) have a noise-reduction rating of 25 decibels. That covers the majority of the tools in the woodshop. The adjustability is infinite. They will fit you correctly.

The safety glasses are labeled Z87+ which meets or exceeds the standards set by the American National Standards Institute (ANSI) for high-mass impact, high-velocity impact, drop-ball impact and penetration tests. Also, there are three choices of lens options – clear (for indoor use), smoked (for bright environments) and amber (for high-contrast requirements). You can get the lenses to fit your needs for $20 each.

I'm a believer. Whenever I'm milling lumber or working with machinery in the shop, I protect both my eyes and ears with SoundVision Eye Protection.

— GH

SoundVision Eye Protection

FullPro ■ 888-873-8557 or fullpro.com

Street price ■ $38

For more information, circle #150 on Free Information Card.